The Showcase for American-Made Products and Services

USA

CTIA WIRELESS 2005

From its days as a small spring meeting of communications industry insiders, the CTIA expo has grown to become the premier international gathering of Wireless communications professionals. CTIA WIRELESS 2005 will be the industry's largest show and exposition and it will mark the 20th anniversary of the event.

"Everything Wireless" will be the focus of CTIA WIRELESS 2005, produced by CTIA-The Wireless Association, March 14-16 (pre-conference day on the 13th) at the Ernest N. Morial Convention Center in New Orleans, Louisiana USA. More than 30,000 attendees will gather to network, transact business, and socialize in one of America's most exciting cities.

"CTIA is an international organization that represents all sectors of the wireless communications industry, from tower to end users" said Steve Largent, NFL Hall of Fame football player, former Oklahoma congressman and new president and CEO of CTIA.

Concurrent with CTIA WIRELESS 2005 will be the 2005 Tower Summit and Trade Show, a showcase for tower and infrastructure providers, and the IEEE Wireless Communications & Networking Conference. Educational sessions and seminars are scheduled both before and during the three-day conference. A highlight of CTIA WIRELESS 2005 will be a Tuesday evening gala featuring entertainment by Jay Leno, Emmy Award-winning host of the "Tonight Show."

Delegations of foreign attendees are encouraged to attend the show. International attendees to CTIA WIRELESS 2005 who will need a visa must complete the "Invitation Letter Request Form." Delegations are eligible for free "Platinum" passes to the exhibit hall and keynote sessions.
